Q: XMLHTTPRequest responseCode:200 with https? I get an XMLHttpRequest: responseCode:200 with https+data+mimeType+url("application/xml; charset=utf-8"). This happens when I call XMLHttpRequest.send() (with send as a member of XMLHttpRequest) with a file:// source. It also happens when I copy the responseText from the request into an editor and write at the beginning of the text. I tested this with XHR requests to If I replace with it no longer works. If I understand the XMLHttpRequest docs correctly the response should only be available if the received response text starts with . So what is happening here? In my theory it has to do with http vs https. But that doesn't make sense to me. Windows 8.1 with Chrome 32. A: The important thing here is that the HTTP response to XHR requests is an HTTP response, and not an XML response. The XML request string that you get from the server just looks like XML. The response to your request will include HTTP headers that instruct the browser how to treat the response. Assuming that you are talking about a query then you can check the network tools in your browser's developer tools to see that the http version of the request results in the expected HTTP response. The result of the XHR request is likely the same as the result of the query, and the browser treats the response the same way. If you request then the server does return an XML document. If you check the network tools for this request, you will see an HTTP request, and only the HTTP response. Effect of age on function and structure of isolated perfused rat heart. Function was assessed by the coronary flow response to intracoronary injection of prostaglandin F2 alpha, and structure by the aortic flow response to intracoronary injection of both norepinephrine and isoproterenol, as well as by the surface area of the ventricular myocardial tissue.

Q: ASP.NET MVC: How to bind jquery number input to a model i am using jQuery to update the value of input after clicking a button. This is what i have in my view: @using(Html.BeginForm("Update", "ajax-addnew", FormMethod.Post, new{ id="ajax-addnew-form"})) { @Html.LabelFor(x => x.Fields) @Html.EditorFor(x => x.Fields) @@Html.ValidationFor(x => x.Fields)@ } And then i have this javascript on my controller: [HttpPost] public JsonResult Update(Model type) { List f=new List(); f=type.Fields; return Json(f); } The problem is that the model type is null. When i debug this function my type is null because that's the name of the input tag, not the class object, i am trying to give it a class name as id=name but it wont work. I dont want to have to use @Html.TextBox(x => x.Fields.Name.Name). I am really stuck on this, any help is very appreciated. A: Have you tried to change the name of the input field for example id="Name" and then use @Html.EditorFor(x => x.Fields.Name), without the.Name? In case it does not work, try this code: @using(Html.BeginForm("Update", "ajax-addnew", FormMethod.Post, new{ id="ajax-addnew-form"})) { @
